Clayton Neill Sr. has resigned from the Carmel Sanitary District board after 19 years' membership. He said the district had accomplished the last of its big projects for the present and it is a convenient time to bring in a new person.

To everybody's astonishment, Street Commissioner Francis Whitaker's Junipero Street center planting plan, two years in the making, barely got city council approval last week with a three to two vote.

John Chitwood and Mayor Frank Putnam wanted center parking, a battle that was fought to conclusion two years ago with the Carmel Citizens' Committee in support of the center planting area.

John Chitwood has consistently insisted that the value of a parking stall outweighs the value of a tree. It was the mayor's vote that provided the surprise.

According to Whitaker, 14 pines, several oaks, and a maple will go into the two-block long center planting south of Ocean. The undercover will be toyon, wild lilac and other native shrubs . . . no geraniums.

Members of the Carmel Volunteer Fire Department are inviting the community to inspect the fire house this week, Fire Prevention Week. Tonight all fire engines and the Red Cross ambulance will parade through town before the firemen's annual water fight at the intersection of San Carlos Street and Ocean Avenue, 8:00 o'clock.

The 40-foot commercial fishing vessel Maku is still stranded at the mouth of Carmel River. The boat drifted onto the beach Saturday night when the anchor failed to hold offshore during a heavy wind. Rescued after being swept overboard were Fred Eastmalley of Winchester Bay, Oregon, owner of the boat, and Orville H. Stees of Inglewood, crewman. Both men have left here and a private party will try to float or salvage the Maku.

Just Back From England Rosen Discusses Decline Of Drama And Literature

By RAYLYN PENNEY

Gazing into a crystal ball which he warned might have "a few cracks in it," a Peninsula writer just back from 18 months in England said this week he's afraid English-language theater and literature are heading into a bleak future.

Victor Rosen, who lived several years in Pebble Beach before going to reside in Sussex last year, made his more-than-half-serious prophecy after seeing a number of British plays of the "dustbin" school and comparing them with their counterparts in America.

If the present trend continues, he said, the Living Theater will soon be dead.

Since the central theme of many if not most of the "dustbin" plays is lack of communication between man and man, he said, we have more and more characters who are inarticulate on stage to the point of silence.

"I predict that the ultimate play in the theater of the future will be a play in which about 20 characters remain absolutely speechless and motionless for two and a half hours. Yet the audience, conditioned through the years by this trend, will walk out convinced they have witnessed a great revelation and are taking home a Message. They will not understand this Message but they will consider it deeply significant.

"It's already happened in music. In London recently at Wigmore Hall there was a concert of non-music. The artist sat at the piano and played nothing. It was a sonata of silence in four movements, if I recall correctly, and consumed the time that a sonata of that length would originally consume. There was a similar instance in

Arts Commissioners Want Puppet Stage At Forest Theater

Arts commission members, yesterday afternoon, recommended to the city council that a small puppet theatre be built at the Forest Theater where "an old, decaying caretaker's cottage" now stands. Puppets of Carmel have offered to construct the small theater for all puppeteers, using two box-like buildings that formerly were placed on the Forest Theater stage. Seating will be above the small stage on the hillside.

Commissioners Fred Ryder, Glenn Kearns and Richard Lofton were appointed a committee to explore shell-type screens for the Forest Theater stage, to be used for musical programs. Commissioners have some money for this purpose from donations at Forest Theater Sunday afternoon programs this summer. They hope to provide shell screening that may be added to as more money is available.

Mr. Kearns reported that plans for the memorial art gallery in the city council chambers have been given to the city building inspector and bids for painting.

Costly Bussing Late Classes Loom For J. H.

Students who attend the new junior high school at the mouth of Carmel Valley next fall will either keep late hours or cost the school system the price of "four or five additional buses."

In any case, trustees of the Carmel district learned last night, at least one large, new 91-passenger bus will have to be purchased, perhaps two, even if the new school operates on a 9:30 to 4:15 o'clock schedule.

The school, yet to be built but slated for completion in mid-August of 1962, will accommodate some 600 students of whom at least 400 will be living a mile or more from the school. (One mile is designated maximum walking distance according to a standing board policy.)

In a report prepared and presented by Wayne Greenfield, assistant superintendent of schools, and Ed Goodrick, school transportation manager, figures showed that by dropping back the proposed starting time to 9:30, the district can transport its junior high students with existing buses and one additional bus. Starting at an earlier hour, when the buses are in use for the other schools, would necessitate the four or five new conveyances.

Dr. Walter Klas, principal of the new school, said of the proposed starting time, "It's late. There would be supervision needed for students arriving at 9:00, before class time, and on some days a number of the youngsters would be getting home after dark. But if it's a choice of this or four or five new buses, then it must be

Citizens Education Committee Has Five New Members

Trustees of the Carmel Unified School District appointed five new members to their successfully functioning Citizens Educational Study Committee at a meeting last night.

They are Mrs. Frederick Duhring, Maynard Petersen, Dr. Max Tadlock, Mrs. John Taylor and Mrs. George Walker, all of Carmel except Mrs. Taylor who is from Carmel Valley.

They will serve along with this year's chairman, Dr. Richard Bell, who remains on the committee, and Mrs. Howard Benedict, Tom Brown, Mrs. Louis Gardner, Mrs. Floyd Harber, Sidney Kalmbach, Dr. Howard McFann, Mrs. Donald McKenzie, Mrs. Elizabeth Oenning and Jack Wickham.

The committee, formed a year ago, spent last year evaluating curriculum, teaching methods, grading procedures and other phases of school operation, in close cooperation with teachers and administrators, as well as the board.

Buffington New Youth Center Adult President; Board Struggles To Find Money Denied By The School Board

At the close of a two-hour meeting yesterday afternoon the Carmel Youth Center Adult Board of Directors elected James Buffington president for the next nine months. The election of officers is held in July but was postponed this year until after the fund drive got under way.

Robert Connell was elected vice president; Karen Hicks, re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Mr. Buffington, elected to the Carmel City Council in 1956, served as street commissioner during his four-year term of office. He represented the Carmel Business Association on the Carmel Youth Center Board at that time, also served on the Citizens Advisory Committee for the city's new master plan. He has been active in the Carmel chapter of the American Red Cross, also leader of Cub Pack 107 for the Church of the Wayfarer. He is a member of the Carmel Lion's Club.

Jim Buffington came to Carmel in 1946 from Omaha, Nebraska, where he was manager of the claims department of a national insurance company. He also served on the mayor's airport and sanitation committees in Omaha, his native city. His wife Jane, an artist, is a member of the Carmel Art Association. He has two daughters, Mrs. Vincent Colletto, and Mary, a student at University of Pacific.

Board Drops Kids' Savings Program "Too Much Trouble"

At what point does saving become wasting? Can saving money, for instance, be a waste of time?

Carmel District school board members evidently thought so last night when with a minimum of debate, they ended the present school savings program effective next fall.

The program, under which youngsters bring money (usually small change) saved during the week to the classroom on a designated day and turn it over for deposit with a local bank, grew out of the federal savings stamp program launched during the war years.

The children may be saving money, the trustees felt, but they may also be wasting their teacher's time on a function more properly the province of the home.

"Not that we want to go on record against thrift," one board

PADRES WIN TRIPLE-HEADER AT HOLLISTER

Carmel High's newly-formed lightweight football team set the pattern for last Friday night's grid activity at Hollister as it blanked the Hollister lightweights, 6 to 0, and then rooted the Padre jayvees to a 27-0 win over the Hayseeds and the varsity to a 26-0 victory over the big Hollister club. Inspired defense by all three teams served to shut out the hosts in all three games.

Steve Fairfield, Padre rookie halfback with a flair for the long-gainer, was the sparkplug in the Carmel varsity attack, setting up the game-clinching touchdowns with a dazzling display of broken-field running. The diminutive 130-pound senior used up over 140 yards of turf during his brilliant runs and scored the first touchdown for the Padres.

The Padres completely outplayed the slow heavy Haybalers, driving to a touchdown the first time they had possession of the ball. Fairfield got the last nine yards with a slant inside tackle after setting up the score with a 35-yard scamper through the entire Haybaler defense. Ahead 7-0 at the end of the first-half, the Padres got the clincher early in the third period when George Pollock and Dave Terry took turns blasting the Hollister line to set up a Holman-to-Shively forward pass good for the six-pointer. Rick Baldwin toed through the conversions after the first two touchdowns to give the Padres a 14-0 bulge going into the final period. George Pollock and Rick Baldwin put more icing on the cake by hitting paydirt for two more scores in the final period.

Strong defensive play by Pete Morse, Pete Conway, Terry Tweedie, David Harris, Ted Leidig, and Charlie Davis served to give Carmel game control throughout the contest.

Carmel's junior-varsity had too much Fluegge for the outmanned Hollister squad, powering to four touchdowns without having to resort to Coach Fred Rainer's famed passing attack. Fullback Marlin Fluegge put on a devastating show as he scored two touchdowns and clipped off nearly 200 yards on the ground. This stubby junior galloped 70 yards for one score and powered seven yards for another besides setting up two other scores with his power running. Quarterback Bob Larson and Dennis Clark registered touchdowns three and four for the Little Padres, Clark zipping 65 yards for his six-pointer.

A near-perfect defensive job by the Little Padres put the damper on any offensive threats engineered by the Hayseeds. Top stoppers for the Padre jayvees were Phil Zobel, Gary Mumford, Grant Pollock, David Preve, Jim Markowitz, Claude Dechow, and Don Clark.

Lightweight John Tolan got the Carmel gang off to a good start against the Haybalers when he scored the night's first touchdown to lead the Padre lights to a 6-0 win over the Hollister freshmen. This was the first outing for the Red and Gray lightweight squad, but more action lies ahead for the little sprouts when they tangle with Monterey, King City, and Pacific Grove.

CLEAT MARKS

Coach George Porter's Monterey Peninsula College Lobos moved into the Coast Junior College Conference pennant chase with a resounding bang last Friday night when they upset the favored San Jose City College Jaguars, 12 to 7, in the league-opener for both teams. The Lobos parlayed a hard-nosed defense with some fine clutch running by Jerry Hatcher, Dick Austin, and Skip Murry to jolt the title aspirations of the Jaguars. The Jaguars nearly pulled the game out of the fire in the last minute when they moved to the Lobo five-yard line and had four downs to move into pay dirt. However, the fiery Lobo defensive crew was up to the occasion, throwing the San Jose backs for losses on the first two downs, and recovering a fumble on the third down to save the game. This Saturday night at 8 o'clock, the Lobos entertain Coach Bill Abbey's Foothill JC Owls in another league battle. This one is always good entertainment since Foothill is over 50% staffed by former MPC teachers, coaches, and administrators . . . Monterey High School appears to be building a football dynasty with winning teams in the lightweight, junior-varsity, and varsity divisions. The Green & Gold lightweights are now riding a 20-game win streak, the junior-varsity appears capable of beating any varsity team in the B-division of the CCAL, and the varsity holds convincing wins over Los Altos, Paso Robles, and McClymonds this season. Lowell High School of San Francisco, favorite to win the San Francisco Triple-A League, invades MPC Stadium this Friday night to give the Toreadores their toughest test of the season. Lowell is highly rated by the San Francisco scribes and will be favored over Coach Dan Albert's small but quick eleven . . . Big Jim Mankins, King City High's jarring fullback, has been getting the attention of several college coaches in his first three games and the 215-pound line-smasher hasn't disappointed the college scouts. Spinning off the Mustang single-wing attack, Mankins riddled the Paso Robles defense for three touchdowns, shattered Hollister with four jaunts into the end zone, and kept the entire Gilroy defense upset to lead his mates to a 19-0 win over the Mustangs.

CARMEL HIGH GRIDDERS HOST GILROY SATURDAY AFTERNOON

League Standing

Carmel	2	0
King City	2	0
Pacific Grove	2	0
Gilroy	1	1
Gonzales	1	1
Live Oak	0	2
San Lorenzo	0	2

Coach Red Elder brings his Gilroy Mustangs to Bardarson Field this Saturday afternoon in an attempt to slow down the surge of the Carmel Padres who are again threatening to make a runaway of the league race. With two games played and five to go, the spirited Padres are deadlocked with King City and Pacific Grove for the top spot in the league standings, having disposed of both Gonzales and Hollister in workmanlike fashion. King City, considered by some experts as the team to beat this season, clipped Hollister and Gilroy to remain undefeated. Coach Charlie Howell's Pacific Grove Breakers are the surprise team of the league so far, holding wins over San Lorenzo and Live Oak. Gilroy looked good while beating San Lorenzo, 12 to 6, but the Mustangs were no match for King City last Friday night and bowed to Ernie Piper's gang, 19 to 0. Gonzales got in the win column at the expense of the Live Oak eleven, clipping the Acorns, 6 to 0.

In addition to Saturday's clash between Carmel and Gilroy, other CCAL B-division games are slated for Friday, Oct. 13. King City hosts the San Lorenzo Valley Cougars; Hollister is at Live Oak; and Gonzales travels to Pacific Grove.

Back From England Rosen Discusses Decline Of Drama

Carnegie Hall when a four-minute composition of silence was played in the middle of a regular concert of modern music.

"And in painting, of course, it happened long ago. In Hollywood I once saw a large canvas covered with white paint except for the lower left corner where there was a tiny red rectangle. I do not recall the artist but I certainly do recall the price. It was $850. And it had some pretentious flapdoodle of a title.

"This non-production sort of thing in the arts is taking hold, I believe, because it makes things so much easier on everyone, particularly on composers, playwrights and painters."

Casual conversationalist, occasional wit and friend of many Carmelites who met him when he lived on the Peninsula before, Victor Rosen himself is the author of a number of books, best remembered of which is perhaps Victory in My Hands, a book he wrote for dual-amputee Harold Russell, the serviceman-star of the movie, Best Years of Our Lives.

"I don't profess to be an authority on English drama and literature," Rosen added, "nor did I go to England with the idea of making a survey of English letters, but merely to produce some literature of my own. However, the "dustbin" or "kitchen sink" trend is something you can't help noticing, if you go to the theater at all.

He listed Arnold Wesker and Harold Pinter, whose play The Caretaker opened in New York about two months ago, as "dust binners." Our own American dustbin, he said, is occupied by playwrights like Paddy Chayevsky and Tennessee Williams, only over here it's called an "ashcan."

"Within a week at one English theater I saw a revival of Hamlet with Jeremy Brett and then I saw The Caretaker. Hamlet is 350 years old, a play with no surprises in the plot or even in the lines. Yet it was still able to move and hold the interest of the audience.

"The following week at The Caretaker, I had difficulty hearing because of the audience snoring. The only reason I stayed to the bitter end was to see what caused the London critics to cry it up to 400 performances in the West End.

"London critics, incidentally, seem far more prejudiced than New York critics. The London ones are really arty and message-conscious and they review plays on their religious, sociological and philosophic values only, saying practically nothing about their entertainment value.

"Plays that make no pretense to having profundities the London critics hit over the head and kill. One of these was Enid Bagnold's The Last Joke with John Gielgud and Ralph Richardson. It had polished, literate dialogue, interesting characterization. London critics liked it no better than they liked Noel Coward's Waiting in the Wings, which was also first-rate entertainment, if not first-rate Coward.

"Shakespeare had no Message of his own. Historians have never decided what he believed in personally. His characters were real individuals with opinions of their own, not mouthpieces for the playwright. With all respect to Shaw, that's why Shakespeare was the better man.

"Part of the trouble with the 'dustbin' school, besides its being dedicated to the proposition that life must be ugly and also pointless, is what I call 'the deaf man techniques.' Characters are required to repeat each speech four or five times at the top of their lungs in the hope of getting across their ideas.

"Personally, I think the modern playwrights are missing the point. The root of the problem is not that we cannot communicate, but that we are for some reason no longer willing to make the effort to understand another person. It takes effort and insight to understand another. But we expend our effort trying to get our own thoughts formulated. If there's no one attending to what you're saying, if you converse with someone too preoccupied with his own problems to give ear to yours, then naturally there's going to be lack of communication, even in a world where we have better means of communication than ever before.

"Which brings up the excuse that the 'dustbin' (English) and 'ash can' (American) schools are merely giving expression to the mood and spirit of the times. They are hardly doing that. We're living in an age of high adventure and fruition when men are reaching into outer space, traveling at phenomenal speeds, creating machines that can think and conquering disease.

"Yet our playwrights and authors instead of being in tune with the times are sitting at the Wailing Wall, beating their breasts and crying in the wilderness, if the metaphor isn't too mixed."

Mr. Rosen also had a handful of comments directed specifically toward English fiction. "It suffers from being constipated by tradition," he said.

"Compared with American fiction it lacks vitality except for the Angry Young Men, who now that they have achieved some success, have discovered that they are neither so angry nor so young any more.

"Fiction tends now to be genteel imitation of early Evelyn Waugh and Aldous Huxley. From a number of things I read I got the feeling they are writing for each other with private allusions and localized references.

"In a novel which came out last fall, for example, a character was said to be 'speaking in an E. C. 4 voice.' I asked the author, whom I happen to know, what this meant and he said people in the E. C. 4, or financial area, of London speak a certain way. I still don't know what way."

Getting closer to home and also back to the subject of theater, Victor said, "Among the changes made in my absence, the one I have noted with the most pleasure and gratification is the addition of a professional theater here. (The new Wharf.) At long last the Peninsula will give its would-be actors the opportunity to see real pros at work and to learn from their good examples."

Those who know Victor Rosen will realize he would not have had all this to say about the plays of others without having tried his own hand at play writing. A play was, in fact, one of the writing projects he worked at while living in Horsham, Sussex, spending last winter huddled with his typewriter over an English-type coal hearth in a somewhat uncozy country cottage.

He's calling his play, he said, The Fretful Porpentine, a dramatic excursion in 1½ acts, translated from the Italian by Ugo di Feccato. "It's very contemporary," he said. "Two of the characters don't say a word the entire evening."

In his long career as a writer, Rosen has been at various times editor of Radio Guide and Screen Guide in Chicago, managing editor for Hillman publications in New York City (his birthplace), public relations agent for Bruno Walter, Richard Tauber, Paul Whiteman, Benny Goodman, Count Basie, Eddie Cantor, Burns and Allen, Jascha Heifetz, Orson Welles and others.

In addition to the Russell book, he was collaborator with Admiral Franco Maugeri, head of the Italian Navy during World War II, on Maugeri's autobiography, From the Ashes of Disgrace (Harcourt-Brace), and has written several books in the crime story field including A Gun in His Hand and Dark Plunder.

Among his other projects have been a play of the 40's, Carnival, set in 16th Century France; a musical on the life of Edgar Allen Poe, The Searching Heart, in collaboration with Dorothy Waring of Alabama; a book, Mosquito Doctor, on the life of Dr. Morton Kahn (E. P. Dutton) a book on financier Otto Kahn (Hermitage), Otto the Magnificent, and Wanderlust (McGraw-Hill), a collaboration with Hans de Meiss-Teuffen, Swiss adventurer.

Music On The Peninsula

By Mary Lindsay-Oliver

Beethoven's opera Fidelio, rarely offered since three performances at the time it was written, has taken a long time to be on standard repertoire; but judging from its presentation by the San Francisco Opera Company last Thursday, should become a prime favorite, especially if conducted by so knowledgable and sympathetic a musician as Leopold Ludwig. He received tremendous applause for the No. 3 Leonore Overture, interludes and guidance of the whole work.

This was Beethoven's only opera (though he planned to do more) and is outstanding by reason of the high morality and purity of its motive and the profound, tonal beauty of the music, contrasted with the depressing tragedies of other composers' operas. Fidelio, as applied to Leonore, the brave heroine, is a great act of self-sacrefice and faithfulness. The Dutch soprano, Gre Brouwensty, making her American debut, carried off the difficult, touching part with dramatic musical understanding, appealing voice and acting. Fritz Uhl, tenor, as her imprisoned husband Florestan, is a newcomer to San Francisco and disclosed another fine voice and dramatic intensity. The whole cast was one of distinction and the chorus exceptionally fine, to which the full house was overwhelmingly responsive, demanding endless curtain calls. Fidelio, repeated Sunday at the Berkeley Greek Theatre, will be given again at the Opera House on October 24.

At the Fol de Rol and Opera Ball last Wednesday I heard Lily Pons who received the prize reception for her singing of the Bell Songs from Lakme, also Mary Costa, Irene Dalis, Giorgio Tozzi, Renato Cioni, Guiseppe Zampleri and Sandor Konya as well as seeing some delightful ballets by the San Francisco Ballet members, which, with flashing lights and the great auditorium filled, was certainly a festive sight.

With only a few days until the first of this Season's concerts by the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra a complete house is expected to welcome the musicians and their new conductor, John Gosling. Last season brought an advance and enthusiasm for the programs which, today, mean so much to the cities that have a devoted ensemble that can play them. We therefore anticipate continued growth in the five pairs of concerts for Carmel and Salinas, one for King City and several Children's concerts. On Tuesday Handel's Water Music, first played by fifty musicians on a barge on the Thames at a river party for King George I; a Suite from Dello Joio's opera The Triumph of Saint Joan that moved people to tears when premiered by the New York Civic Opera Co. in 1959, and the celebrated Brahms Symphony No. 4, will be in the program.

SNOWBOUND GUESTS ARRIVE

The Henry Garsvas are entertaining Mr. George Morrill, Mrs. Garsva's father, Miss June Ward, her sister, who arrived Monday night, two days late on a cross-country drive from Dover, New Hampshire. They were caught in a blizzard in southern Wyoming Sunday, and after nine hours stranded in their car in a snow block, they were rescued by the national guard and spent the night in the armory with 500 snowbound motorists.

The State Division of Highways, at the end of November, plans to start a month-long project at the intersection of Carmel Valley Road and Highway One. To correct a traffic hazard at the intersection, the Division of Highways will install modern illumination and construct traffic channels to provide safe left turns from Highway One onto Carmel Valley Road. The project will cost $52,000.

Passengers on a northbound plane last night spent two hours at Monterey Airport while Sheriff's officers, the FBI, the Secret Service, Railway Express and airline representatives searched personal baggage and pocketbooks of all passengers for boxes of fire crackers which had been reported aboard the plane to the Sheriff's office in a telephone call from San Francisco.

The firecrackers were discovered in baggage checked by George Stefan Petrusich of Palo Alto who was returning home from military service in North Carolina. He admitted to transporting the firecrackers, not allowed on a plane.

The Board of Supervisors has approved plans for the reconstruction of a portion of Via Contenta Road, from Pilot Road southeasterly to a point 300 feet north of the Carmel Valley Road intersection, in the vicinity of Carmel Valley Village, according to Supervisor Thomson J. Hudson.

Construction will start shortly after bids are opened on November 6.

The work consists of placing cement treated base over the existing pavement and applying a double seal coat, on two 12 foot wide traffic lanes and two three foot wide shoulders, for a length of 2,000 feet.

The project is planned to be completed during December, 1961.

A poll of teachers and principals at the Carmel schools showed they were just mild about the banking deal for little folk. As one principal summed it up, "no one is either wildly enthusiastic or bitterly opposed."

One teacher said, "It really only takes up about two minutes a week in actual school time." But another thought, "It's just one more thing to shed tears over — losing the bankbook."

The board was unanimous in closing out the accounts.

Dello Joio Music On Symphony Program At Sunset School Tuesday

Works of Handel, Brahms and Dello Joio are included in the opening concert program of the Monterey County Symphony's sixteenth season. The orchestra will begin its 1961-62 concert series Tuesday evening at 8:30 o'clock in Sunset Auditorium, under the direction of its new resident conductor, John Gosling.

The Triumph of Saint Joan, a symphony by the American composer, Norman Dello Joio, will be heard here in its first local performance. Also on the program are Handel's Suite from the Water Music and Brahms' Symphony No. 4.

Written in 1951, The Triumph of Saint Joan, presents a musical description of Joan's life-with the movements subtitled, The Maid, The Warrior and The Saint. Although not yet 40 years old, Mr. Dello Joio has gained recognition as a leading American composer during the past few years. His most recent effort, the opera Blood Moon, was given its world premiere by the San Francisco Opera Company last month.

The Monterey County Symphony which yearly attracts an increasing number of members will boast a seventy-five man ensemble for the coming season. Important among the new players is Owen Dunsford, recently appointed to the post of concert master and assistant conductor. Mr. Dunsford, a native of New Zealand, studied at both Miami University in Ohio and the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music. He comes to the local symphony with five years of orchestral experience, including positions with the Charleston Symphony of West Virginia and the Springfield Symphony in Ohio. Mr. Dunsford is a teacher of instrumental music in the Monterey elementary schools.

English Farce See How They Run At Studio Friday

Tomorrow, The Studio Theatre will present an English farce in the classic tradition called See How They Run by British playwright Philip King.

When the producers, Betty Hackett, Royden Martin, Barbara Horder West and John Halloran decided to put on a play they were unanimous in their conviction that at this tense and disturbing time of world affairs, the public wanted and needed to laugh. They therefore set about looking for the funniest play they could find. Betty Hackett and Barbara Horder West, who is also to direct, had both seen See How They Run produced elsewhere and agreed that it was everything they could ask for. John Halloran asked a New York director who was staying with him what was the most amusing play he had ever done and he said without hesitation See How They Run.

The plot concerns an ex-American actress married to the English vicar of a small village near an American Air Force Base and contains the amusing ingredients of a visit of a Bishop, much mistaken identity and the search for an escaped Russian prisoner.

The cast: Peggy Chandler, Dorothy Weston, Florence Venn, David Scott Hubert, Derek Napier Lawford, Pete Lissaman, Vernon Read, Barry Meehan, Herbert Smith.

Marni Nixon To Sing In Second Program Of MPCA Series

Marni Nixon, soprano, a native of Altadena, California, will be presented by the Monterey Peninsula Concert Association in the second of the concert series on Monday evening at the Pacific Grove Junior High School Auditorium.

Instrumental training was a must in her family, and together with her three sisters, parents, and often neighbors, they had their own family orchestra. She studied violin privately, and for some years played the violin with the Meremblum Junior Symphony Orchestra of Los Angeles.

After winning a contest singing the Blue Danube at the Pomona State Fair, Miss Nixon was so impressed with the idea you could interpret music much more personally with the voice that she became a vocal artist.

Possessing perfect pitch and a natural ability for the stage, her search for training took her to Pasadena Playhouse, opera workshops at LA City College and USC, Stanford University, Tanglewood Music Festival, and Roger Wagner for choral and orchestral works. She has appeared in title roles with the Los Angeles Opera Company, the Guild Opera Company, and as Gretel in Hansel and Gretel with the Cosmopolitan Opera Company in San Francisco.

Miss Nixon's ability to absorb herself in a role resulted in her being much sought after for dubbing in motion pictures. Long to be remembered will be her singing for Deborah Kerr in both An Affair to Remember and The King and I. Both have been made into sound track albums.

Television has claimed Miss Nixon as soloist with Tennessee Ernie Ford, Lawrence Welk, the TV Cameo Opera series from New York, and the Ford Foundation Spotlight on Opera.

The concert begins at 8:15 o'clock and admission is limited to members of the Monterey Peninsula Concert Association. Members of other community associations may attend on a space available basis.

Free chest X-rays will be given to the public Monday afternoon in the Monterey County Health Department's mobile X-ray unit parked near the post office, 1:00 - 5:00 o'clock. Results of the X-rays will be mailed on postcards later to those taking advantage of this health service.

FROM A LIBRARIAN'S NOTEBOOK

By Ruth Galvin Thornburg

It was with great interest that we read in the paper of the collection of Durer etchings now on display in San Francisco at the Legion of Honor galleries. This library has two of Durer's etchings on permanent display. One is entitled Melancolia and the other is The Death's Head. Also included in the library's collection are one by Rembrandt, two by Martin Schoengauer, a Millet, a Meryon, and eight by Sir Seymour Haden. These are illustrious names in the field of graphic arts. Many of the etchings are very old. Martin Schoengauer died in 1491 and Albrecht Durer in 1528. In his great work entitled The Book, Douglas McMurtie speaks of Schoengauer as a genius among the engravers who worked on embellishments for the early books we call incunabula. This work he did about 1466.

The original framing of our collection was done sometime in the twenties. We are now in the process of having them cleaned and furnished with fresh mats. We often wonder if our patrons hurrying along the narrow aisles between the rows of books, ever stop to look at these lovely things hung at eye level on the ends of the bookcases. Several are hung above the card catalog in the circulation room. Fresh mats and clean faces should make more people notice them. Not long ago a tourist stopped at the desk to enthuse about the Seymour Haden collection. He said that if the world knew we had them hanging here, many more people would come to see them. Let them come. Soon the collection will be ready for everyone to enjoy.

Along this same line, let us remind you again of Gladys Schmitt's last book which is entitled Rembrandt. It is fiction based upon fact, and its gives the reader not only the events of the life of a great artist, but the very atmosphere of Amsterdam and Leyden in the early seventeenth century. This is no book to use as example of how fast you can read. This is a book to absorb and savor.

According to the reviews, Love in a Dark House by Meria Zellerbach of San Francisco will lose the author many friends because every reader within her circle will see himself in the book. That's as may be. You will probably want to read the book.

A generation ago Africa was one huge sprawling continent on a world map, maybe pink, or green, and nobody bothered much about it. Today it is so vital in the news that we are deluged with books about one or the other state in Africa, or a city, or a county within a state. This week we have Congo, Background of Conflict, by Alan Merriam. This is the history of the Congo, before independence and after, written by a man who has spent several years living in Africa and researching for this book.

Most of the new books this week are non-fiction. There just weren't many novels for us, so read and improve yourself this week.

Bishop Pike, Preacher For Consecration Of All Saints', Nov. 1

Plans are under way for the Solemn Consecration of All Saints' Episcopal Church by the Bishop of California on November 1, All Saints' Day. This celebration will conclude the 1961 Parish Expansion Fund drive which has seen the erection of offices and classrooms, the acquisition of six acres of land in Big Sur and the inauguration of a parish day school. Bishop Pike of California will preach at the ceremonies at 8:00 o'clock in the evening, during which the mortgage will be burned and the church building consecrated for religious use.

A series of celebrations honoring the event are being planned, beginning with a Service of Witness on October 22 at 4:30 o'clock. Trevor Huddleston, C.R., the Bishop of Masasi, Africa, will be preacher.

At next Sunday's services intercessions will be offered for the medical profession. This annual custom at All Saints' occurs on the Sunday nearest the Feast of St. Luke, the beloved physician, which is October 18.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERMON

The healing and redemptive power of divine Truth will be brought out at Christian Science services Sunday in the Lesson-Sermon on the subject "Doctrine of Atonement."

Peter's healing of the lame man as related in Acts (4) will be included in readings from the Bible, together with his reply to those who questioned him regarding the source of his healing ability: "Be it known unto you all, and to the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole."

One of the correlative citations to be read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy states: "The same power which heals sin heals also sickness. This is 'the beauty of holiness,' that when Truth heals the sick, it casts out evils, and when Truth casts out the evil called disease, it heals the sick" (p. 135).

Poetry Day Program

The Arena Blanca Poets will celebrate National Poetry Day at their October 18 meeting, to be held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Robert J. Oberfohren.

The purpose of Poetry Day is to honor all poets, past and present. Since 1950 California's Governors have issued an annual Poetry Day Proclamation. Last year California became the ninth state to secure legislation officially designating October 15 as Poetry Day when a resolution, introduced in the State Senate by Richard Richards and in the State Assembly by Edward Elliott, passed by unanimous vote.

Arena Blanca's program next Wednesday evening will include original poetry readings by Blanche Moke and Bernice Minarik, and a discussion of poetry techniques led by Olivia Young.

Saturday, there will be a field trip to Waddell Beach north of Davenport to observe shore birds, also to the McCrary Ranch to see winter resident birds and have a picnic lunch. All persons planning to go on the trip are asked to meet at 9:00 o'clock in the morning at Waddell Beach.

AUTUMN PANORAMA

My wondering eyes
Cannot compass the hillside
Blazing red and gold
Against the autumn blue sky.
Let me hold one bronze blossom.

—Joyce W. Webb

AFTER AUGUST TIME

Late in the afternoon
We begin to form opinions.

It is not easy, we tell ourselves over and over. But it is hot and late, relatively speaking the clock is ticking and it is late in the afternoon.

Yesterday was greener, of an apple leaf on bough.
But we must face the facts—
Weevil, and russet, and lateness bore deep within the bark;
and decision hangs on a slender thread.

Ideologies and influences are either for, or against us; and we must make grave conclusions
precise, and alert,
as methodically as the moment permits,
though it is hot, and at the turn of the season,
and the clock is ticking
late in the afternoon.

—Vera La Claustra

SALUTE TO INVINCIBLES

"I am all powerful Wind.
Scorning the wisdom of Man,
I call my aide, demon Fire,
To wreck vengeance on his land."

The searing Fire rushes forth,
Despoiling the gracious land;
Cities are burned, fields laid waste—
A fearsome challenge to Man.

With hope undimmed, Man rises
From depths of ashes and loss
"I am master of my fate,
Again will I build my house."

—Adelyn Fleming See

THE LIVE OAK

This tree leans over the creek,
Its branches bend down to the water
As if drawn
By their own reflection.

Captive in the wood,
Bound by time's concentric circles,
What dryad
Directs their long Narcissus-gaze . . .

Seeking a self
Lost
In green yesterdays.

—Mary Child

High School Carnival Grossed $5,230 For College Scholarships

Gross receipts from last Saturday's Carmel High School Scholarship Carnival amounted to $5,230.93, according to Miss Dorothy Wright, vice principal. This is a new record for the annual event sponsored by the High School P-TA unit and Girls' League. Expenses were approximately $1,000. Net profits will be used for college scholarships awarded in June to members of the senior class.

New booths sponsored by the P-TA this year were moneymakers, Miss Wright reports. The art booth which sold pictures by local artists raised $577.06. The produce booth offering fruit and vegetables donated by local growers took in $170.26.

The carnival had a storybook theme this year. Students paraded through the business district Friday afternoon in costumes depicting the theme. Those who won prizes were Elaine Kachavas as the Snow White witch, and Bruce Hyndman as Raggedy Andy. Peter Benjamin, dressed as the Ace of Clubs, was the driver of the car judged best-decorated. Passengers in his convertible were Clonard Bunn depicting the White Rabbit; Patty Hinton as Alice in Wonderland; and costumed like Peter as cards, Pam Rosewall, Diane Caldwell, Pat Layton, Nancy Bibb, Allison Miller and Marilyn Swim.

Carnival King and Queen, Steve Harth and Karen Reid, both seniors, rode in the parade in a decorated convertible driven by Jon Raggett. Afoot, in cars and on bikes, dozens of other students in storybook costumes joined the parade. The high school band played marching music. City officials, police and fire departments paraded, too.

Adult School Offers Radiological Course Monitor Training

From time to time during the past several years the California Disaster Office has sponsored a Radiological Monitor Training Course. Instruction this year will be held at the Carmel High School.

The training course is designed for individuals who wish to volunteer for service with the Radiological Defense Service of the California Disaster Office and for public employees from law enforcement, public works and fire departments. There is no fee for the instruction.

Individual citizens who are interested should get in touch with Charles Dawson, Principal of the Adult School, from 1:00 to 4:00 o'clock in the afternoon or 7:00 to 10:00 o'clock in the evening, Monday through Thursday next week. The class begins on Monday night, October 23. There will be six sessions and a field exercise.

The training equipment will accomodate a class of 25 students. If there is a larger enrollment a second class may be started.

Instructors will be Charles Howard of the Naval Postgraduate School and Tom May, Radiological Defense Officer with the California Disaster Office.

DOOLEY BENEFIT SUNDAY

Ted Weston, proprietor of the Hill Hofbrau, announces that all receipts in the restaurant on Sunday will be turned over to the Dr. Tom Dooley Foundation to purchase the mobile hospital unit which is being sent to aid Tibetan refugees in India by Monterey Peninsula supporters. He also promises musical entertainment will be provided through the afternoon and evening hours, starting at 1:00 o'clock.

Buffington New Pres. Of Youth Center Adult Board

since its founding, indicating that he did not choose to serve again, turned the meeting over to Jean Pistulka, outgoing vice president of the Youth Board, to preside until new officers were elected. He took the opportunity to compliment her as "one of the hardest workers I've seen in 12 years of Youth Boards."

The election came at the end of an exceptionally well-attended meeting, which amounted to a rallying of the clan in face of trouble. The nature of the trouble as expressed by McCreery: "We must seek ways of augmenting funds that we have been refused," (Two weeks ago the school board turned down the Youth Center's request for $5,000, for the first time since the Youth Center's founding refusing to bear a share in meeting the Youth Center payroll.) "I am not satisfied there was any reasonable justification for denying the funds," McCreery continued. "There was a lot of pussyfooting, passing the buck and I think a lot of politics besides. I don't know where the money is coming from. It will have to be raised."

He concluded his opening statement with the proposal that a woman be employed to be present all the time the youth center is open, "to alleviate criticism, whether it is justified or not."

Robert Connell said that first it would be necessary to adjust the budget to an anticipated income reduced by $5,000 and find out where an additional salary could be found. Mrs. M. H. Tobiasen, who is bookkeeper and chaperone during the evening hours, said that she would not be able to be present in the Youth Center when it is open in the afternoon.

Connell and Larry Rose enquired into snack bar costs, questioning the employment of two high school girls at $50 a month to operate it. Youth Center Director Jack Giles said that operating the snack bar on a voluntary basis had not worked out. "The snack bar committee would have the members lined up on a work schedule, but the kids are at the beck and call of the parents and couldn't always show up." Also with a number of people handling food, one runs into difficulty with the health department, he said.

George Dear's motion that a committee be appointed "to re-examine the budget, so we'll know what we're going to have to go out and get," McCreery appointed Connell, Rose and John Chitwood.

When McCreery reported that he had received a suggestion that there should be a combined annual fund drive for Pony League, Little League and Youth Center, Mayor Frank Putnam characterized such a drive as a "pint size community chest which would operate to the disadvantage of the Youth Center." Connell said the Little League was self-sufficient, "without getting in with another organization," however, "Maybe Carmel should have a drive for its own needs and give what's left over to the Community Chest." Carmel's is the only youth center on the Peninsula that does not receive community chest funds. Dear apparently expressed the concensus of the board when he stated emphatically, "We should make our own drive on our own."

McCreery introduced Allen Knight, a long time friend of the Youth Center, whom he had asked to attend the meeting to present a suggestion he had for augmenting the youth center income. Knight proposed that Youth Center dues be raised from $1.00 and $1.50 to $10.00 per year. Also, that a revolving fund be set up through contributions of service clubs and individuals to pay dues for children of families who couldn't afford to pay for the dues themselves. "The kids can work to reimburse the fund, or not. Seven hundred memberships would amount to $7,000."

A letter from High School Principal Warren Edwads objecting that some students who had got excuses from school to work in the Youth Center food concessions for the golf tournament last month had not worked in the concessions, and expressing the opinion that only students with B averages or better should be excused for concession work was turned over to a committee to meet with Edwards. The board agreed with his objections to youngsters with poor school rating being excused from class and suggested that the committee should get a list of B and above average students from which the center may make selection of workers. The problem will not arise again this year, Giles pointed out, since the other concession events will be held on weekends, and the school has a holiday for the Crosby Tournament.

In addition to McCreery, Putnam, Rose, Chitwood, Buffington, and Connell, other board members present were: Mrs. Ian Belangee, and Glenn Sorey. There were only four absences.

Next meeting will be held November 8, 4:30 o'clock at the Youth Center. Regular meeting day is the second Wednesday of the month. The meetings are open to the public and the board welcomes attendance by interested persons.

The $6,000 Youth Center Fund Drive is still short $1,000 of its goal. Contributions may be brought to or mailed to the Carmel Youth Center.

Firemen Respond To False 'False Alarm'

Members of the Carmel Volunteer Fire Department answered two fire and two ambulance calls this week.

Saturday afternoon, 3:12 o'clock, firemen washed down the street at the corner of Dolores and Sixth streets when gasoline from a ruptured automobile gas tank flowed across the intersection and along the gutter on Sixth. Ten men stood by until all danger was over and the car was towed away.

During this time there was a two car collision at the same intersection. The Red Cross ambulance was called and firemen took Miss Christina Rosenquist of San Francisco to the Peninsula Community Hospital. She had bumped her head on the windshield of one of the cars.

Sunday night at 7:12 o'clock a man ran into the fire station and reported a house on fire at the corner of San Carlos and Eighth opposite Sunset School. He had seen flames on the roof. A general alarm was sounded. When firemen with pieces of equipment arrived at the location they could find no trace of fire and thought they had responded to a false alarm.

Next day, however, Vernon Todd telephoned the fire house to say he had reported the blaze. Investigation revealed there had been a chimney flare-up in an unoccupied house where Mr. Todd had reported seeing flames the night before.

Fire Chief Robert Smith praised Mr. Todd for quick action in reporting the fire to the department.

Tuesday firemen took Mrs. Erma Rutledge to the Community Hospital after they received a call from Seaview Inn reporting she had been injured in a fall.

done."

Board members were also concerned over the fact that because of its location on the east side of Highway One, most students who walk (and all those who walk from town) will have to cross the heavily traveled state route and many will be walking down the highway and the valley road where no adequate footpaths are provided.

The district is currently exploring this problem with state officials and safety experts.

The study session on transportation problems at the new school occupied a major portion of last night's meeting time. Board President Dr. Grant Fletcher explained that solving transportation difficulties and establishing a starting time for classes is a key move toward facilitating the work of planning the entire program for the school. Hence the early consideration by the board.

Studying a handful of maps and charts on the transportation problem, trustee Clayton Neill, Jr., quipped, "This is the sort of thing that lends itself to computors. If we could feed the number of buses and children and distances into a machine, we might even find we could do away with four or five buses."

Also on the topic of transportation, the board again discussed plans for a bus service yard at the Tularcitos school site, for which $10,000 was provided in the last bond issue. The board had been asked for early study of plans for the service area since on the completion of these plans hangs the question of relocation of a gasoline supply tank for buses on the Tularcitos grounds. The tank, placed when only one building existed there, is now too close to new buildings for clearance by the state fire marshall.

Dr. Klas also asked for and received board permission to apply for federal aid for math, science and modern foreign language equipment for the new school under the National Defense Education Act of 1958.

He said the purchases, including science lab items, material to develop the School Math Study Group-type math at the school, and equipment to outfit two rooms as language labs, would necessitate an outlay of $8,834, with half to be supplied from federal funds and half by the district.

In other business the board:

Accepted a final report from Kennedy Engineers on feasibility of using a septic tank at the new junior high school site. Latest estimate is around $5,000 for a temporary tank, following a soil analysis and verbal approval by the county for its use there.

Granted a request from Mrs. Cleo Wells, fourth grade teacher at Carmelo, for one year's sick leave.

Voted to adopt, subject to late minor changes, the curriculum to be used in the schools next year.

Authorized a "minimum day" schedule soon at elementary schools so a workshop session for teachers can be held on the SMSG math.

Agreed to meet in study session, but not as a board in official session, with the Carmel Sanitary District board next Tuesday at 5:00 o'clock at the sanitary office in the Ricketts building to talk over sewerage plans for the junior high site.

Heard a financial report from Greenfield which included the information that $118,000 of the district's building fund for the new school has been reinvested for six months, since the money will not be needed until later than anticipated.

School Attendance Predicted Double In Ten Years' Time

Based on enrollment figures for the past ten years submitted by Miss Gladys Stone, Superintendent of Monterey County Schools, attendance has more than doubled since 1951. The prediction is that in the next ten years school enrollment in the county will double again to 92,000 pupils.

Approximately six new classrooms, also six additional teachers at each grade level, each year, are needed to keep up with expected enrollment, grades one to six.

In grades seven and eight, three to four classrooms; three to four teachers will be needed annually.

High school enrollment next year alone is expected to increase in Grade Nine so that 25 additional classrooms and teachers will be necessary.

Future predictions are based strictly on the present population of the county. The influx of population each year is not considered. New industry and enlargement of military installations are two factors that add to ever-increasing school enrollments. The figures above were compiled by schools and governmental agencies.

Of increasing concern to education systems in Monterey County is the rate of drop-outs at the age of 16. Can these young people be absorbed by the labor market? What are the reasons for youngsters quitting school? This problem is most acute between sophomore and junior years in high school.

The number of junior college students in the county is 3222; or Monterey Peninsula College, 1296; Hartnell College, 1926. Next June 1689 seniors will graduate in the county; 169 in Carmel. Enrollments in other grades at Carmel High School are: freshmen, 200; sophomores, 242; juniors, 162. There are 18 more first grade students than graduating seniors in Carmel district, 19 more kindergarteners than first graders.

Enrollment in Carmel Unified School district elementary grades on September 15 was 1660 pupils; high school, 773; total 2433. The pupil increase this year over 1960 enrollments is 80 pupils.
